Reading: pricing in Estepona is being actively managed in both directions this week — two developers repriced downward while five units moved up, against a new-build median sitting 18% below the town resale benchmark. Downward reprices are the earliest observable signal of a project under sales pressure; upward moves this dense usually track phase releases.

Why no one else can send you this table: Spain's portals publish current asking prices only and overwrite the history nightly. The official series (INE, notaries) run quarterly, months in arrears. Avena observes every coastal new-build every night and keeps what changed — this is week one of a ledger that deepens daily and cannot be reconstructed backwards at any price.

WEEKLY MARKET PULSE

This report, for your towns, every Monday: every observed price movement, delisting and new release, with per-town aggregates and the week-on-week read.

REPRICE ALERTS

Same-day notification when any tracked unit in your selected towns changes price or leaves the market — the earliest available signal of a competitor under pressure or a phase selling out.

ABSORPTION LEDGER

Which units actually disappear, and after how long at what price — observed absorption, not portal listing counts.

BENCHMARK POSITION

Where your pricing sits against every competing new-build and the town resale benchmark, recomputed nightly.
